The purpose of this program is to provide eligible institutions of higher education with funds to expand and improve their ability to deliver education and career training programs that can be completed in two years or less, and that result in skills, degrees, and credentials that prepare program participants for employment in high-wage, high-skill occupations, and are suited for workers who are eligible for training under the Trade Adjustment Assistance for Workers program, under Chapter 2 of Title II of the Trade Act. The Department of Labor is implementing this program in partnership with the Department of Education.

“Through the first three rounds of grants more than 800 colleges across the country are helping to build strong ladders of opportunity that allow people to secure a foothold in the middle class, while also helping help businesses compete and grow. This final round will help scale what works, strengthen career pathways , and improve the way employment and education data are used in assessing programs throughout the country.”

U.S. Secretary of Labor Thomas E. Perez

“Community colleges play a vital role in equipping our nation's students with the skills they need to meet the demands of today's careers. This program is not about tinkering — it's about transformation. This is not about getting more students to enroll — it's about getting more students to graduation day and into good jobs.”

U.S. Secretary of Education Arne Duncan
